

Complete Confession

Made by Mrs. Harrison That She Opened Saufley's Tomb

DECLARES THE LORD IN VISION TOLD HER HE WOULD RAISE HIM FROM THE DEAD IF SHE DID THIS.

Possessing apparently, the sublimest faith, such as shall enable a believer to move a mountain, Mrs. Harrison Friday afternoon confessed that she had opened the grave of Geo. B. Saufley in Buffalo cemetery last Monday night, confident that once she had lifted off the top of the outer box, and seen his face, the Lord would raise him from the dead. Alone and unaided "save for the help of my Savior at my side," she said, she dug open the grave with a spade, working from shortly after six o'clock in the evening until three o'clock the next morning. Thinking that the box lid was screwed down and unable to raise it, she had started home for a screw driver when daylight overtook her and she knew that her labor had been in vain. With tears in her eyes and no attempt at dissimulation, she declared that the Lord appeared to her in a vision Saturday night and told her to do this thing. She said that he gave her sweet assurance that once she had seen the face of young Saufley he would raise from the dead. She believed that it would be as the Lord had said, she declared, and could not do otherwise than obey his mandate.

Mrs. Harrison's sensational confession was made to County Judge Bailey in the court house here late Friday afternoon at her examining trial. She was brought to Stanford from the home of her uncle, Peyton Campbell, far down in Casey, whither she had fled on Tuesday night, as she says that she might be out of the way until the affair had died down and the feeling against her might be softened. Rowan Saufley a brother of the dead young man, finally found the woman, after an unceasing search of almost a week which he carried on with the relentlessness of a bloodhound, without sleep or rest.

Convinced as is almost everyone that the woman is mentally unbalanced at least as far as her religious fervor is concerned, County Judge Bailey held her over to await the grand jury action, under $300. As it was late and she had no friends here, she was taken to the residence of Jailer Dink Farmer last night. Saturday morning, as she was unable to furnish bond, she was given final trial in the country court and fined $75 by a jury. She will in all probabilities have to remain in jail to pay this. A lunacy warrant has been issued against her upon which she will be tried.

Caught in Casey

It was early Friday morning when Rowan Saufley found Mrs. Harrison at the hills of her uncle in the hills of Casey, and she started at once for Stanford with her. They drove all day reaching here about five o'clock that afternoon. News that at last the woman ghoul had at last been captured, spread quickly and a large crowd had gathered in town to get a sight of her as she was brought into town by Saufley, Sheriff, W. L. McCarty, and other officers. She was taken at once to the office of County Attorney W. S. Burch, where Judge Bailey held her examining trial behind closed doors, with only relatives of the Saufley family present and a few others. Mrs. Harrison said that she desired no attorney, nor advice, but was willing to tell her story in full believing that she had simply done what was right and what was the will of the Lord. In reply to the questioning of County Attorney Burch she gave in detail the whole story without reserve and seemed glad to make known to the world the wonderful faith of which she was possessed and how close she was to the Lord.

Mrs. Harrison's Story.

"The Lord came to me the Saturday night previous, Mrs. Harrison said, and told me to go to the cemetery and open the grave of Mr. Saufley, and that when I had done this He would bring him back to life. I had thought a great deal about the death of the young man; he had been my attorney and was very dear to me, much dearer than many knew. I was sick at the time of his death, and did not get to attend his funeral and wanted to see his face once more. So when my Savior came to me and told me what to do, I did not hesitate. I went to Stanford from my home on the Danville pike late Monday afternoon and brought a spade from Mr. W.

H. Higgins' store. It was a little after six o'clock when I went to the cemetery. I stopped my horse in the drive way near the grave, but he became restless and pawed so much that I later removed him to the fence nearby and hitched him. I worked alone at the grave, throwing out the earth. I heard the clock strike seven soon after I had begun, and dug on until nearly three o'clock in the morning when I had reached the box in which rested the coffin. No one molested me; I heard no noise. The Lord was with me; my Savior worked by my side; but for his grace I could have never done what I did for the work was hard. When I reached the top of the box I was unable to get it off however. I tried to prize it off with the end of the spade but it seemed to be screwed on, and I was finally forced to quit without sight of his face or seeing the promise of the Lord fulfilled. I started home thinking to secure a screwdriver, and return but it became light while I was out on the Danville pike, so I gave up the idea. I could get no help for I knew of no one in whom I could place any confidence. I stopped at a spring near the Lewis Curtis place and got me a drink for I was faint. I also washed some mud from my shoes, and gave a skit to Mrs. McGuffey living nearby to clean. I threw my spade into a pool of water as I crossed the bridge over the creek beyond Sam Castello's house. I came back to town without going home for I wanted to have my horse rested. I was convinced from his restlessness in the graveyard that his shoes were too small and were hurting him, so I had them all taken off and larger ones put on, and took the old one home to use on another horse. I then went home, but when the men came later I knew immediately what they were after when they began to investigate things and after they had left thought I had better leave for a while until after things quieted down so the feeling might not be so strong against me. They had come to the right place for evidence and found it, so I left to visit my uncle in Casey county, who had recently asked me to come. When I got there I told him the whole story that he might know the truth."

Visited Grave Often.

Mrs. Harrison was anxious to clear up every point in the case and answer all questions put to her at length. She admitted that she was the veiled woman who had asked the sexton about two weeks ago what would be the cost of taking up the body of Saufley.

"I knew where his grave was," said she "for I visited it frequently; in fact just as often as I could. I was there every Sunday. After church I would spend the noon hour there and leave a little bunch of flowers. He was very dear to me. Then came the Lord to me and told me just what to do. I believed I was doing his will but when I could not lift the box top, I had to surrender for I was too weak to lift it. The fact that the top had not been lifted is taken by all as conclusive proof of the woman's statement that she did the work alone for with the aid of a man could easily have raised it, for it was neither screwed nor nailed down."

Mrs. Harrison told her story in a manner which convinced everyone who heard her that she believed every word she said as to her ghoulish mission being heaven directed. She is about 45 years of age, and has been a member of the Baptist church many years. A few years ago she was divorced from her second husband P. M. Harrison, well known farmer of this county. She has three children, one daughter about ten years who makes her home with her mother and another daughter in Louisville.

Mrs. Harrison begged piteously not to go to jail. "I did not know what my punishment would be," she said to Judge Bailey "but feared that the law would not give me justice for what I had done for the Lord, she wanted to get away. I hope you will let me pay a fine and let me go for I have a little daughter who needs a mother, so badly, and another ill in Louisville, so be as merciful as you can." She denied that she had watched at the window of Rowan Saufley's home early Monday night to see if he was at home before she visited his brother's grave, though a woman's tracks were found in the mud beneath a window the next morning.

Rowan Saufley acknowledges his obligations to Deputy Sheriff Hendrickson and Jailer Richardson of Casey county who rendered assistance and piloted him to Peyton Campbell's place. To Bledsoe Bailey of this place, Mr. Saufley is also greatly indebted for his faithful efforts and devoted friendship. It was only after a protracted request that Bailey left Saufley's side and sought a little rest.

Hustonville, Feb. 6. If a good road meeting could be held here at anytime it might be redound to the interest of the West End of Lincoln. The pikes radiating in all directions would likely profit by their resolutions and Judge Bailey of Lincoln and Judge Wells of Casey county would wake up and stop the slaughter of their pikes. Mr. Allen Barnette of near this place but who at present engaged in teaching school near Concord New Hampshire has been awarded a Rhodes Scholarship from the state of Kentucky. FROM THE WILD AND WOOLY WEST

FRANK RIGSBY WRITES BACK TO FRIENDS IN DEAR OLD LIN. COLN.

Tucson, Ariz. Feb. 3.

Dear Interior Journal readers:— If you will allow space in your paper for a few items of interest of my trip through the west, I will try to comply with my promise to some of the I. J. readers and tell of some of the happenings along my journey.

On December, 10 1910, I boarded the afternoon train to Louisville from Stanford. Arriving in Louisville a due time, I spent the night at the Willard Hotel. Next morning I was up by seven o'clock and on my way to Illinois Central depot, where I purchased a ticket calling for points mentioned. Princeton and Paducah, Ky., Memphis, Tenn., Jackson, Miss., New Orleans, La., Houston, San Antonio and El Paso Texas.

I arrived at El Paso at 6:30 a. m., on December 16th, staying there until the afternoon of the 17th. At this point I visited my aunt, Mrs. C. E. Johnston (formerly Mrs. W. H. Hutchinson) and my cousin, Mrs. W. H. Pender and family. I had a very pleasant visit with my relatives and found El Paso a thriving city of 40,000 inhabitants, and everything as modern and up-to-date as in a much larger eastern city. There are several larger business houses under construction there at this time, one of which will be twelve stories high.

In company with my cousin Miss Leah E. Hutchinson, we went to Juarez, Mexico, and visited places of interest, among them being the market place, jail and the old church. The market place is a large building, with stores of all kinds under the same roof, partitions limiting space to each dealer. The jail is a rude affair. Most of the prisoners are kept in the yard with high walls around it and a shed to sleep under. A few are confined in cells, open on two sides, except for the heavy iron bars. They are allowed one blanket for bedding and ten cents a day for food. The church is claimed to be three hundred and fifty years old, but is in a good state of preservation, having been remodeled a few years ago.

On the whole I was glad to get back to El Paso and feel that I was in the United States again.

I arrived in Tucson at 12:30 a. m., on the 18th day of December. My cousin, Joe R. Hobbs, met me at the train and took me to the home of his mother, and my aunt, Mrs. J. C. Wheat, formerly Mrs. E. Y. Hobbs, of your county, where I was welcomed by all the family.

During the following day, probably not less than 50 visitors called at my aunt's house, some of them being my cousins, but most of them were merely curious to see the newly arrived country jake from Kentucky. I think they expected to see me with a jug of moonshine whiskey under the arm and a hogshod of tobacco under the other.

In the afternoon H. B. Burges took me out in his automobile and showed me a great deal of the surrounding country. Mr. Burges's wife is my cousin, formerly Miss Lenna Hobbs, who was, for a long time, Lancaster correspondent to your paper.

I spent two days with my cousins, James White and John Colyer, both formerly of Kentucky. They are railroad boys and work in the yards here at good wages. While with them, I went jack rabbit hunting and saw a dozen or more, but didn't kill any.

H. S. White is also working in the railroad yard here, and says he made more in one month here than in a year on his farm in Kentucky.

Christmas was spent with my aunt and her family, and we were all very merry. On Monday evening my aunt gave a social party and a number of young people were present. The evening was spent in games and social pastimes, and it was very well enjoyed.

Almost everybody here remembers his friends at Christmas with useful gifts, and not a child in the city, however poor, was allowed to awaken on Christmas morning without finding some present in his little stocking, and not a needy family in the city but what received a Christmas basket with food for the whole family, and clothes for those who needed them.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Burges entertained a New Year watch party at their home. A large crowd of young people and some older ones were there and they watched the Old Year out and considerable of the New Year in before leaving. Any one would certainly know when in Tucson, the close of the Old Year for I think every whistle was blowing, all bells were ringing, guns were fired and there were in fact all kinds of noises. The climate here is very agreeable. When I arrived the flowers were still blooming in the yards, but since that time, we had two rains and several frosts, and things froze the last two nights. The sun shines brightly every day, but it is cool at nights, and comforts and blankets are needed for every bed.

Tucson the county seat of Pima county, the metropolis of Arizona, and the educational and business center of the territory, is located on a plateau overlooking the Santa Cruz and Rillito valleys, surrounded by the Tortillita, Tucson, Santa Rita and Catalina mountain ranges. On foot—great variety, principally jack rabbit and mountain, game is found in bits, cotton tails, blue pigeons, Senora doves, quail, wild ducks, bear mountain lion, wild cat, coyotes, and in some remote places, wild hogs.

Tucson has an elevation of 2,400 feet above the sea. The population is estimated at 23,000. The city is well supplied with schools, there being five large ward school buildings, besides the new sixty thousand dollar high school building. More than 24,000 pupils are enrolled this term, and over sixty teachers are employed, and in addition to these, there are nine principals.

Tucson is the site of the University of Arizona, with its score of professors and teachers, and its hundreds of students, and also of the United States Agricultural Experiment Station and Botanical Laboratory.

There are many fraternal orders here, many of them occupy their own handsome buildings. Nearly all of them, and many of them have large, the religious organizations are represented and attractive places of worship. The Catholics are by far the strongest denomination, and their Cathedral is magnificent, a place of beauty and interest.

There are two daily newspapers and half a dozen weeklies, four banking establishments, half a dozen large, electric street car service, and all the improvements and conveniences of an up-to-date city. The streets are well graded, wide and clean.

Where water can be obtained, intensive farming is profitable, as any crop planted will produce in abundance.

As my item is getting to be so long, I will ring off, and if this does not find the dreaded waste basket, more anon.

Wishing the I. J., and its many readers a prosperous New Year.

I am,
FRANK T. RIGSBY.

SAYS OKLAHOMA IS BEST STATE FOR FARMER.

Broken Arrow Okla., Jan. 24.

Readers of the I. J.:

I just wanted to let you know that I am still among the living, seeing a letter from my old neighbor, Bud Reynolds in the last week issue I was glad to hear he was doing well in our adjoining state, but was surprised to see him advise his friends not to come to Oklahoma for this is the finest wheat and corn belt there is in any western state, although we haven't had a rain in four months. But the wheat crops look fine, and we haven't had any snow this winter.

I was sorry to see the prices so dull on tobacco. My advice would be to my old Kentucky friends, that want homes in the future not to pass up dear old Oklahoma where you can raise abundance of everything, wheat, corn, cotton, and tobacco. I would like to see a letter from some of my knob friends, from Waynesburg, Wish you all a happy new year.

COUNCIL ORDERS SALE OF FRANCHISE

AND CITY ATTORNEY TO PROSECUTE CUTE TELEPHONE COMPANY IN THE COURTS

The Stanford City Council went right to the lat at its meeting on Thursday night of last week, when it gave final passage to an ordinance directing the mayor to sell a franchise for a telephone company to operate in Stanford. Directions were also given to City Attorney J. B. Paxton to take in to the courts at once a suit to test the rights of the company to do business in the city now, without a legal franchise, and to prosecute it under the ordinance previously passed for so operating.

There was much discussion of the matter, but the will of the people, that the Council fight this matter out if it takes all summer, prevailed and the ordinance for sale of a new franchise and for prosecution of the company, went through finally. The people want to know whether the East Tennessee Company is empowered to raise its rates here whenever it sees fit and whether they are compelled to stand idly by and be forced to pay what it pleases for the service. Most of those who had the phones removed when the first raise in the rates was made, have had them put back, realizing that the matter should first be settled by the city, and that as the Mayor and the Council are elected to represent the people and look out for their interests, it is their province to take what steps necessary to compel this or any other corporation to respect the people's rights.

It is understood that City Attorney Paxton will push the matter at once, and bring the issue before the courts at the earliest time possible.

Mayor A. B. Florence will advertise a franchise for sale for the legal time and due notice will be given the company to secure one. The opinion of the Court of Appeals in the Frankfort suit which was won by the city will be followed explicitly, and a thorough test of the questions involved and rights of the people will be made.

The council entered into a contract with Rout and Pennington for the construction of a concrete bridge on Water Works street and one on East Main at cost of $175. The Fiscal Court was notified by the city to repair or build a new gridge on Cut Off pike.

Up Against It

ARE WOMEN ON NEW ANTI-SPIITING LAW.

Members of the Woman's Improvement Club of Stanford who fostered the city ordinance against expectoration upon the side walks are in a quandary. After having appeared before the board of council and secured passage of the ordinance, they are up against the proposition of having the new law enforced, and though very anxious for its passage, press a hesitancy against appearing in court and prosecuting the violators. So far no arrests have been made or warrants issued by the regularly constituted police officers of the city for violation of this ordinance. However, determined that offenders should not go unwhipped of justice, several of the leading women took upon themselves the duty of watching for offenders, among the male population, and one of them admitted that they have a goodly list of names. She was told to present them to the proper officials, and appear as witnesses in the Police Court against the offenders and they would be duly punished for their crime. Here it was the ladies balked, and up to the hour of going to press none of them has summoned up enough courage to personally appear in court and give evidence of having witnessed the infraction of the city statutes.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

For Circuit Judge

The Interior Journal is authorized to announce Charles A. Hardin as a candidate for Circuit Judge of the Thirteenth Judicial District, at the election to be held November, 1911, subject to the action of the Democratic Party.

Politics was played fast and furious in Kentucky last week. On Friday night Ben Johnson withdrew from the race for governor against McCreary and the next day at a meeting of the Democratic State Executive Committee, the primary call for May 27th was extended to include the United States Senatorial race. There was practically little opposition to this step, after the withdrawal of Johnson from the governor's race. Before the most of the friends of McCreary were opposed to the senatorial primary, because Ollie James the strongest candidate for senator was a warm friend of Johnson and the McCreary supporters saw a chance for Johnson and James to combine against McCreary with both running in a primary.

Johnson's statement upon announcing his withdrawal from the governor's race was a great surprise to many, who believed that he was a game democrat and if defeated would take his medicine like a little man. He claimed that he found prejudice against him so strong on account of the fact that he was a Catholic that he refused to remain longer in the contest. Mr. Johnson declared that he had heard of three judges of the court of appeals saying that they would not vote against him on account of his religion, and he further declared that a newspaper man of Frankfort had been sent to the Eighth Congressional district and a "newspaper placed at his command" to incite his prejudice against him. As every newspaper man in Kentucky will bear out who reads the country papers, the few newspapers which were supporting the candidacy of Mr. Johnson had a great deal more to say and agitated the question of his religion far more than those papers which were opposed him. Regarding the newspaper man who came into the Eighth to fight Johnson, and who started the trouble, the Frankfort State Journal in its issue of Sunday morning said:

"The second of the statements referred to had reference to Mr. Shelton M. Saufley a former Frankfort newspaper man who left here some months ago, much to the regret of his hundreds of friends, to establish himself at his old home town, Stanford, where he purchased from the Walton brothers the Stanford Interior Journal. "Mr. Saufley's venture into the newspaper field as an owner and publisher was known here at the time to be purely a personal venture. For some two years beforehand, he had been casting about over Kentucky for a suitable location to go into the newspaper business for himself. He had no political backing here, or else where in Kentucky, in this venture, and he did not go out from Frankfort as the emissary of any faction within the Democratic party, as Mr. Johnson would have the Democrats of Kentucky believe.

"Since he located at Stanford he has taken a prominent position among the ranks of the country editors being honored by them with the office of Secretary of the Kentucky Press Association. He has always expressed his views fearlessly through the columns of his newspaper. Being established in the Eighth Congressional district, which is the home of Senator James B. McCreary, his Frankfort friends were not surprised that he should support the candidacy of that gentleman for the Governorship, as against Mr. Johnson, of the Fourth Congressional district.

"Democrats in Frankfort generally, especially those who are not members of the church with which Mr. Johnson affiliates, were inclined yesterday to scout as ridiculous the charge he makes that he was prescribed by his opponents within the democratic party, because of his religious views. A large majority of the members of that church in this community and who takes an interest in politics, on the democratic side, were for Mr. McCreary, and opposed to Mr. Johnson. Democrats interviewed on the subject, were of the opinion that Mr. Johnson's charges would flat, and would not injure the party."

MISS ELIZA POLLOCK.

A Beautiful Life Ended.

On the morning of January 23, 1911, Miss Eliza Pollock was called from our midst into the presence of Him whom not having seen she loved.

She suffered intensely through the last days of her life, but seldom is seen such fortitude in suffering and such perfect trust and assurance in the last trying hour.

Miss Pollock leaves one sister, Mrs. P. H. Napier, of Crb Orchard, and a number of nieces and nephews, to mourn her loss. She had been a faithful member of the church of Christ since her girlhood. Quiet and retiring she never sought the publicity but was ever ready to minister to those that needed a friend, a kind word or thoughtful deed. Hers was the power to nestle close to the heart, and by the example of her pure, sweet life led others on to a higher and nobler plane of living.

"She opened her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue was the law of understanding."

She was surrounded by many members of her family when she died, who comforted her. She did not face death with any dread of fear, but prayed that it might the sooner come, her whole thought was for the loved ones whom she was leaving behind.

Love took up the heart of life and smote on all the chords with merit. Smote the chords of self, that trembling, passed in music out of sight.

Her life has been a long, happy one. Her quiet sweet, demeanor has brought comfort to the bedside of many a sick friend and good cheer into homes where she was known and loved. Her family and friends will miss her greatly, but they should remember the words of the great poet: "Nor blame I death because he bare the use of virtue out of life; I know translated human life; Will bloom to profit elsewhere."

Our friends great store of human worth has been translated elsewhere and there it will bloom to profit, in a garden richer and her passing away was that of the Christian—quiet, peaceful, reassuring, with never a dread, a faltering or a look backward. When the summons came clear and distinct, and she felt the touch of Death's cold hand, with all her sweet life of kindness and love behind her, she wrapped, as it were the draperies of her couch about her, and lay down to pleasant dreams. Such lives as hers are not lived in vain, nor such deaths endured without their lesson brought home to all of us. We extend our sympathy to all the members of the bereaved family.

"Green grows the grass above thee Friend of our better days, None knew thee but to love thee None named thee out to praise."

9.—The committee shall meet at 2 P. M. Standard time, at the office of its Secretary, in Danville, Ky., on the next day after the returns shall have been made, and canvass the vote cast at said election, and issue a certificate of nomination.

10.—The chairman of the District Committee is directed to employ a competent person to copy from the regular registration books made for the cities of Danville and Harrodsburg, for the 1910 election, the names of all Democrats, and the person so employed shall return the copies, certified as required by law, to said chairman who shall cause them to be duly delivered to the officers of election; and the chairman is directed to cause to be printed and prepared for use the requisite number and kind of ballots, which shall bear the facsimile of his signature, and he will procure the necessary election supplies, and cause them, together with the ballots, to be delivered to the officers of election as required by law.

11.—The chairman will cause copies of this resolution, certified by himself and the secretary of the committee, to be posted one at the court house door at Stanford, Lancaster, Danville and Harrodsburg, and one in twenty other conspicuous places in each county in the District, for not less than forty days prior to February 11, 1911, and said notice shall also be published in each democratic paper in the district.
